xard and make oluble protest, out the lords Salem T. Whitney aw to it that the was quickly and effectively silenced. But even a worm will turn, and the female worms have turned.

worms have turned. They are now asserting their in-dependence, and I glory in their spank. They say to the lords, "If you can't make a living for me. I'll make my own, and since I am mak-ing my own living I'll do pretty much as I dann please." Now the lords are squawking louder than a farm yard full of turkey gobblers at Thinksgiv-ing time.

Ing time. If the women enter business the lords cry, "Masculine!" If they go in for art the men say they are out of place. If they go in for a good time the lords cry, "Scandalous!" But the women seem to be deaf to their clam-

Even a house full of children no longer enslaves a woman. The new woman checks the kids with the next door neighbor or parks thein in a day nurkery and goes upon her merry way.

The average man will stand upon a street corner and look at the legs of other men's wives, sisters and sweet-hearts, until his eyes look like door knobs. Then he will hurry home and forbid his wife, sister or sweetheart to wear such "indecent clothing." He'll stay out belt the mint like a mohair sult in a thunderstorm, yet he expects his wife to go to bed as soon as she washes the supper dishes. The new woman no longer stands for the old line of bunk. The men have their claars and pipes and the women have their claarsts. The men have their lists. The men have their states and the women have their necking parties. What's good for the gander is sauce for the goose. No more double standard for them. If mon have their "chickens," the women have their "chickens," the women have their "shelks," etc. etc. ad ininitum. "Thon't preach morality to us; dem-onstrate it?". So saith the modern woman, and once again, as in the Garden of Eden, the man seeks to place the blane upon the woman. Leave 'em alone? The woman are all right. Nor are they a blit worse than in ancient days when they hid their charms under a white night-gown; or when they wore hoop-skirts or bustles, or trains, or hobble skirts. The average woman who shows her dimpled knees in public will kick you on the chin if you speak about them in private. The modern woman thinks as se-riously of love as the old-fashioned girl that many men delight to talk about, but they are not willing to bestow their love upon a man with a heart like an apartment building. She looks forward to marriage and a wife and partner, not a slave or a servant girl. Women are discarding the lords, tyrants and slave drivers as they dis-cause it gives them a more youthful appearance, and since man never gets too old to fancy "chickens," who has the right to blame them? On ralny, windy days men pick themselves choice spots on the streets and stand there in deliance of pneu-monia and rheumatism, rubbering for a peek at the women's legs. The women do. Whatever the women are them an eyeful. The desired to please the male is the inspiration behind everything that women do. Whatever the women are them an eyeful. The desire to please the male is the inspiration behind everything that women do. Whatever the women are string then an eyeful.

Jim Vaughn, one of the oldest and ness, was a constant visitor at the Lincoln while we played there. Miss Julia Moody, who made her stage debut with Whitney and Tutt's Smarter Set company, is successfuly starring in Lucky Sambo. Mrs. Smith, 760 Harvard St. Washington, D. C., gave us the most delicious dinner we have eaten in many moons. She is the mother of Lucille Smith. recent star dancer with "Desires of 1927." Lucille is now being featured with Frank Montgomery's Revue, playing the Paradise cabaret, Atlantic City. While in the capital city Miss Ma-bel Ridley was happily entertained by her host; of friends. stant round of entertainment by her friends. "Bottom Land" "Bottom Land" "Bottom Land" is the title of the new show coming out under the di-rection of Charence Williams, star-ring Sara Martin, the dramatic blues singer. The show is now in rehearsal at the Gayety studio down on Broad-way, and the opening date will ap-pear within a fortnight, it is said. Aaron Gates, 200 W. 135th St., New York city, the dancing master of nusical comedy, is staking the show. The book and music is by Charence Williams, Broadway publisher. The opening is awaited with confidence, as this production is opening with special music, corgeous scenery and beautiful costumes. Arthur Bryson

Arthur Bryson Convalescing from bullet wounds in both legs, as the result of being shot about 5:30 a. m. in the Nest club, 169 W. 133d St., this likable chap now less alsed in Edgecombe sanitarium, 137th St. and Edgecombe Ave., New York. His many friends in the city have visited him, and many of those out of town have expressed their re-gret at his confinement. Bryson specialized in knee drops and Russian dancing, and his con-finement prevents him from filling a contract with Texas Guinan's show, which opened on the 13th in New Haven. However, the manager will be laid up in bed for two weeks and it will require a two months' rest from the stage before it will be safe for him to work again. "Meliow Musings" for him to work again. "Meliow Musings" This volume of poems has quickly herome a favorite wherever it has appeared. Like a mood chart in music the poems of "Mellow Mus-ings" might ensity he classified ac-cording to your mood. This all-scason volume may be had with the author's personal autograph, by ad-dressing him at 666 St. Nicholas Ave., New York city.
