BOOKER T. WASHINGTON

: efforts, we do not for a

what we exhibit as a result of our inc ould fall far short of your out forget that our reducational expectations but for the constant help that has come to our educational expectations but from the Southern states, but especially from North expectations but for the Southern states, but especially from Northern philife, not only from the made their gifts a constant stream of blanchern states, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blanchern philife, bronists, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blanchern philife, bronists, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blanchern philife, bronists, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blanchern philife, bronists, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blanchern philife, bronists, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blanchern philife, bronists, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blanchern philife, bronists, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blanchern philife, bronists, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blanchern philife, bronists, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blanchern philife, bronists, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blanchern philife, bronists, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blanchern philife, bronists, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blanchern philife, bronists, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blanchern philife, bronists, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blanchern philife, bronists, who have made the constant philips and the constant philips are constant philips and the constant philips are constant philips and the constant philips are constant life, not only from who have made their gifts a constant stream of blessing and lanthropists, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blessing and lanthropists, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blessing and lanthropists, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blessing and lanthropists, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blessing and lanthropists, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blessing and lanthropists, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blessing and lanthropists, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blessing and lanthropists, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blessing and lanthropists, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blessing and lanthropists, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blessing and lanthropists, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blessing and lanthropists, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blessing and lanthropists, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blessing and lanthropists.

ION

outh. gaig ead.

lake

hile

our

and alty d of

ned

l by

out

derteras

ual

tel-

to

nto

ent est.

hat

ip-

tine he tace

at

1g

p-

10

1-

ry

The Wisest among my race understand that the agitation of questions of The Wisest among the extremest folly, and that progress in the enjoyment of social equality is the extremest to us must be the social equality is the extremest folly. ocial equancy is that will come to us must be the result of severe and all the privileges that will come to artificial forcing. No all the privilege rather than of artificial forcing. No race that has anything to contribute to the markets of the world is long, in any degree, thing to contain any degree, of the law be ours, ostracized. It is important that all privileges of the law be ours, but it is vastly more important that we be prepared for the exercise of those privileges. The opportunity to earn a dollar in a factory just now is worth infinitely more than the opportunity to spend a dollar in an opera

In conclusion, may I repeat that nothing in thirty years has given us more hope and encouragement, and drawn us so near to you of the white race, as this opportunity offered by the Exposition; and here bending, as it were, over the altar that represents the results of the struggles of your race and mine, both starting practically empty-handed three decades ago, I pledge that, in your effort to work out the great and intricate problem which God has laid at the doors of the South, you shall have at all times the patient, sympathetic help of my race; only let this be constantly in mind, that while, from representations in these buildings of the product of field, of forest, of mine, of factory, letters, and art, much good will come, yet far above and beyond material benefits will be that higher good, that, let us pray God, will come in a blotting out of sectional differences and racial animosities and suspicions, in a determination to administer absolute justice, in a willing obedience among all classes to the mandates of law. This, coupled with our material prosperity, will bring into our beloved South a new heaven and a new earth—September 18, 1895.

OUR NEW CITIZEN

From whence came our new citizen? Who is he? And what is his mission? It is interesting to note that the Negro is the only citizen of this country who came here by special invitation and by reason of special provision. The Caucasian came here against the protest of the leading citizens of this country in 1492. We were so important to the prosperity of this country that special vessels were sent to convey us hither.

Shall we be less important in the future than in the past? The Negroes are one eighth of your population. Our race is larger than the population of the Argentine Republic, larger than Chile, larger than Peru and Venezuela combined—nearly as large as Mexico.

ela combined—nearly as large us to clear the forests of your country, to Whether the call has come for us to clear the forests of your country, to Whether the call has country, to make your cotton, rice, and sugar cane, build houses or railroads, or to make your cotton, fice, and so shoulder arms in defense of our country, have we not answered that call? shoulder arms in deletise of educate our children, to teach them thrift, When the call has come to educate our children, to teach them thrift, When the call has come to not filled every school that has been opened habits of industry, have we not filled every school that has been opened habits of industry, have there have been labor wars, strikes, and destructor us? When with others there have been labor wars, strikes, and destructor us? for us? When with others the world an example in each one quietly tion of property, have we not set the world an example in each one quietly attending to his own business? When, even here in the North, the shop, the factory, the trades have closed against us, have we not patiently, faithfully gone on taking advantage of our disadvantages, and through it all have we not continued to rise, to increase in numbers and prosperity? If in the past we have thus proven our right to your respect and confidence, shall it be less so in the future? If in proportion as we contribute, by the exercise of the higher virtues, by the product of brain and skilled hand, to the common prosperity of our country, shall we not receive all the privileges of any other citizen, whether born out of this country or under the Stars and Stripes?

You of the great and prosperous North still owe a serious and uncompleted duty to your less fortunate brothers of the white race South who suffered and are still suffering the consequences of American slavery. What was the task you asked them to perform? Returning to their destitute homes after years of war, to face blasted hopes, devastation, a shattered industrial system, you asked them to add to their burdens that of preparing in education, politics, and economics, in a few short years, for citizenship four or five millions of former slaves. That the South, staggering under the burden, made blunders, that in some measure there has been disappointment, no one need be surprised.

And yet, taking it all in all, we may, I think, safely challenge history to find a case where two races, but yesterday master and slave, today citizen and citizen, have made such marvelous progress in the adjustment of themselves to new conditions, where each has traveled so fast in the divine science of forgetting and forgiving; and yet do not misunderstand me that all is done or that there are not serious wrongs yet to be blotted out. In making these observations I do not, I cannot, forget as an humble offered up on Southern I was and seat, the empty sleeve, the lives offered up on Southern battlefields, that we might have a united country and that our flag should shelter none save freemen, nor do I forget the millions of dollars that have gone into the South from the hands of philanthropic individuals and religious organizations.

Nor are we of the black race leaving the work alone to your race in the or your race in the Sound Go North or your race in the South—mark what this new citizen is doing. Go with me tonight to the Trol. with me tonight to the Tuskegee Institute in the Black Belt of Alabama, in an old slave plantation where a few years ago my people were bought in an old slave pair and sold, and I want eight hundred young men and women working with others, with nearly eight and by day, preparing themselves in I. others, with heard, with and by day, preparing themselves, in literature, in head and agriculture, in dairying, in fruit-growing in stoll head and hand by head and hand by head and hand per head and head and head and head and head and head and hand per head and head and head and hand per head and head science, in agriculture science, in agriculture science, in woodwork, in ironwork, in tinwork, in brick-making, in cloth, in cooking, in laundrying, in printing i brick-making, in cloth, in cooking, in laundrying, in printing, in household leatherwork, in the duties of Christian citizenship—preparing themselves that science—in the science in the scienc they may properly their full quota of virtue, of thrift and intelligence to the prosperity of our their fun questions and that we will be hewers of wood and drawers of beloved country. It is said that we will be hewers of wood and drawers of beloved to wood and drawers of water, but we shall be more, we shall turn the wood into houses, into machinery, into implements of commerce and civilization. We shall turn the water into steam, into electricity, into dairy and agricultural products, into food and raiment—and thus wind our life about yours, thus knit our civil and commercial interests into yours in a way that shall make us all realize anew that "of one blood hath God made all men to dwell and prosper on the face of the earth."

But when all this is said, I repeat, gentlemen of the club, that you of this generation owe to the South, not less than to yourselves, an unfulfilled duty. Surely, surely, if the Negro, with all that is behind him, can forget the past, you ought to rise above him in this regard. When the South is poor you are poor, when the South commits crime you commit crime, when the South prospers you prosper. There is no power that can separate our destiny. Let us ascend in this matter above color or race or party or sectionalism into the region of duty of man to man, American to American, Christian to Christian. If the Negro who has been oppressed, ostracized, denied rights in a Christian land, can help you, North and South, to rise, can be the medium of your rising to these sublime heights of unselfishness and self-forgetfulness, who may say that the Negro, this new citizen, will not see in it a recompense for all that he has suffered and will have performed a mission that will be placed beside that of the lowly Nazarine?

Let the Negro, the North, and the South do their duty with a new spirit and a new determination during this, the dawning of a new century, and at the end of fifty years a picture will be painted—what is it? A race dragged from its native land in chains, three hundred years of slavery, years of fratricidal war, thousands of lives laid down, freedom for the slave, reconstruction, blunders, bitterness between North and South. The South staggers under the burden; the North forgets the past and comes to the rescue; the Negro, in the midst, teaching North and South patience, forbearance, long-suffering, obedience to law, developing in intellect, character and property, skill and habits of industry. The North and South, joining hands with the Negro, take him whom they have wronged, help him, encourage him, stimulate him in self-help, give him the rights of man, and, in lifting

DEMOCRACY AND EDUCATION

It is said that the strongest chain is no stronger than its weakest link. In It is said that the strongest chain there are twenty-two millions of your the Southern part of our country there are twenty-two millions of your the Southern part of our country there are twenty-two millions of your the Southern part of our country there are twenty-two millions of your the Southern part of our country there are twenty-two millions of your the Southern part of our country there are twenty-two millions of your the Southern part of our country there are twenty-two millions of your the Southern part of our country there are twenty-two millions of your the Southern part of our country there are twenty-two millions of your the Southern part of our country there are twenty-two millions of your the Southern part of our country there are twenty-two millions of your the Southern part of our country there are twenty-two millions of your the Southern part of our country there are twenty-two millions of your the Southern part of our country there are twenty-two millions of your the Southern part of our country the southern part of our country there are twenty-two millions of your the Southern part of our country the southern part of the Southern part or our country by ties which you cannot tear asunder if brethren who are bound to you by ties which you cannot tear asunder if brethren who are poully to you would. The most intelligent man in your community has his intelligent would. The most intelligence of a fellow citizen in the Mr. you would. The most intelligence of a fellow citizen in the Mississippi gence darkened by the ignorance of a fellow citizen in the Mississippi gence darkened by the ignormalized would be more wealthy but for the bottoms. The most wealthy in your city would be more wealthy but for the bottoms. The most weater, in the Carolina rice swamps. The most moral poverty of a fellow being in the Carolina and moraling and morali poverty or a remow being and morality modified by the and religious among you has his religion and morality modified by the and religious among you degradation of the man in the South whose religion is a mere matter of form or emotionalism.

The vote in your state that is cast for the highest and purest form of government is largely neutralized by the vote of the man in Louisiana whose ballot is stolen or cast in ignorance. When the South is poor, you are poor; when the South commits crime, you commit crime. My friends, there is no mistake; you must help us to raise the character of our civilization or yours will be lowered. No member of your race in any part of our country can harm the weakest and meanest member of mine without the proudest and bluest blood in the city of Brooklyn being degraded. The central ideal which I wish you to help me consider is the reaching and lifting up of the lowest, most unfortunate, negative element that occupies so large a proportion of our territory and composes so large a percentage of our population. It seems to me that there never was a time in the history of our country when those interested in education should more earnestly consider to what extent the mere acquiring of a knowledge of literature and science makes producers, lovers of labor, independent, honest, unselfish, and, above all, supremely good. Call education by what name you please, and if it fails to bring about these results among the masses it falls short of its highest end. The science, the art, the literature that fails to reach down and bring the humblest up to the fullest enjoyment of the blessings of our government is weak, no matter how costly the buildings or apparatus used, or how modern the methods in instruction employed. The study of arithmetic that does not result in making someone more honest and sale. more honest and self-reliant is defective. The study of history that does not result in making and self-reliant is defective. result in making men conscientious in receiving and counting the ballots of their fellow men is most faulty. The study of art that does not result in making the strong loss with the stron making the strong less willing to oppress the weak means little. How I wish that from the most humble log cabin schoolhouse in Alabama we ASSIMILATION of the progress of the South. le, helping and encouraging nd, with education of head, buy your surplus land, make d run your factories. While the past, that you and your nt, faithful, law-abiding, and we have proved our loyalty watching by the sick bed of ng them with tear-dimmed nble way, we shall stand by oach, ready to lay down our ng our industrial, commerthat shall make the interourely social we can be as things essential to mutual except in the highest intelere are efforts tending to ese efforts be turned into ost useful and intelligent ousand per cent interest. n that gives and him that

from the inevitable:

ind

oined

in pulling the load upward. We shall constine of the South, or one ibute one third to the ve shall prove a veritaevery effort to advance our humble effort at ct overmuch. Starting few quilts and pumprces), remember, the roduction of agriculpers, books, statuary banks, has not been nile we take pride in

BOOKER T. WASHINGTON : efforts, we do not for a what we exhibit as a result of our inc ould tall far short of your moment forget that our part in this can ould tall far short of your moment forget that our part in the constant help that has come to our educational expectations but for the Southern states, but especially from North ould fall far short of your expectations but to southern states, but especially from Northern philife, not only from the Southern gifts a constant stream of Livenists. who have made their gifts a constant stream of Livenists. life, not only from Northern philanthropists, who have made their gifts a constant stream of blessing and magement.

The wisest among my race understand that the agitation of questions of The wiscon and that progress in the enjoyment of social equality is the extremest folly, and that progress in the enjoyment of all the privileges that will come to us must be the result of severe and all the privilege rather than of artificial forcing. No race that has anyconstant to contribute to the markets of the world is long, in any degree, ostracized. It is important and right that all privileges of the law be ours, but it is vastly more important that we be prepared for the exercise of those privileges. The opportunity to earn a dollar in a factory just now is worth infinitely more than the opportunity to spend a dollar in an opera

In conclusion, may I repeat that nothing in thirty years has given us house. more hope and encouragement, and drawn us so near to you of the white race, as this opportunity offered by the Exposition; and here bending, as it were, over the altar that represents the results of the struggles of your race and mine, both starting practically empty-handed three decades ago, I pledge that, in your effort to work out the great and intricate problem which God has laid at the doors of the South, you shall have at all times the patient, sympathetic help of my race; only let this be constantly in mind, that while, from representations in these buildings of the product of field, of forest, of mine, of factory, letters, and art, much good will come, yet far above and beyond material benefits will be that higher good, that, let us pray God, will come in a blotting out of sectional differences and racial animosities and suspicions, in a determination to administer absolute justice, in a willing obedience among all classes to the mandates of law. This, coupled with our material prosperity, will bring into our beloved South a new heaven and a new earth—September 18, 1895.

OUR NEW CITIZEN

From whence came our new citizen? Who is he? And what is his mission? It is interesting to note that the Negro is the only citizen of this country who came here by special invitation and by reason of special provision. The Caucasian came here against the protest of the leading citizens of this country in 1492. We were so important to the prosperity of this country that special vessels were sent to convey us hither.

Shall we be less important in the future than in the past? The Negroes are one eighth of your population. Our race is larger than the population