HARLEM INDUSTRIES WHICH NEGROES PATRONIZE

On The East Side of Street in The District Extending From 125th Street To 135th Street There Are A Few Colored Women Doing Successful Business

In a business sense, "the wheels of industry" is a term which may be applied to the "Almighty American Dollar." It spins around in Harlem in a thousand and one different enterprises, in which colored workers constitute much of the motive power, while the whites operate the throttle.

On the east side of Seventh avenue in the New York City district extending from 125th to 135th streets, there are approximately 150 places of business, of which about three-fourths are owned by colored people. There are enterprises operated by colored men, but which are owned by whites.
The colored men are the patrons of the business, while the whites are the operators.

Colored Women Lead

Colored women in business are outstanding figures in the district. They are engaged in a variety of enterprises, including the sale of goods, the operation of restaurants, and the management of small businesses. The women are generally well-dressed and well-educated, and they are active in the community.

Young women who work as maid servants find employment almost any day at the King College Apartment, at 50 West 131st street, because of the building's reputation for that purpose.

It is not that there is need of such a large working force, but that the work is very lucrative. The girls are paid $15 a week for an eight-hour day, and they must board themselves. The work is hard, and the girls are often carrying heavy tools around all day.
