Speaks On "New Negro In Art"

Allan Freelon, art supervisor of the Philadelphia Schools, was the guest speaker at the Citizens' Republican Club, 15th and Lombard sts., last Sunday.

In his talk, "The Place of the New Negro in Art", he said: "...that the Negro has no more business going back to paint what his ancestors did than the white man." He also indicated that the reason for this absurd behavior, because some white person has instilled this foolish idea for profit.

The meeting was under the auspices of the Negro History Branch in Philadelphia at the Berean School.

Portraits of Robert L. Vann, Louise Beavers, Charles A. Anderson and Albert Forsythe, used in an illustrated lecture, were painted by Charlotte White.

"Auto Home" Man's Funeral Pyre

CAMDEN, N. J.—An old automobile, made over into living quarters, was the funeral pyre of William Mills, 67, who was burned to death last Tuesday. The aged man had made his home in the wreck which was on a lot at 7th and Van Hook streets.

Sometime early Tuesday morning fire broke out in the shack and before the old man could get out, he was burned to death. Evidence of his struggles to release himself were found about the ruins.

John Dillon, occupant of a similar shack, found Mill's body at 7:30.
