Mustered Miscellany YOUNG, P, Jr New Journal and Guide (1916-); Jan 29, 1927; ProQuest pg. 7

Browsing around in a library is fun . . amid the friends Ruskin recommends to us in our high school days is to discover that

But you do find out what dead people thought before they died, and modern people of every lean-ing tell you their ideas in books, magazines and newspapers...... The fundamentalist, the modern-tet the forumer and the aldefish-The fundamentalist, the modern-ist, the flapper and the old-fash-loned girl, the New Negro and even Uncle Tom, each and ev-ery one has either anscrewed the cap of his or her fountain pen... ...or lifted the cover of the type-writer writer.

WHET. A thousand little delights meet one in every page turned.....in every paper, magazine, or book thumbed. It is easy to be nonplussed by the great abundance of inviting reading.....But it isn't necessary to be. Quality, genius, interest often are modest, but being cynical about the little chance of finding them is no way to do so. And the queer things often referred

And the queer things often referred And the queer things often referred to as people.....say, but some wonderful specimens adorn them-themselves onto library chairs..... The Professor with his mind in in-telligence steeped.....Joe Campus who over his paper at co-eds con-stantly peeped.....The matronly teacher and the intellectual gawk... there are types and there are individ-uals, too many to mention.....but it's fun watching. but some rn themuals, too many to it's fun watching.

:*

*

So we browsed around...findin g for instance, Countee Cullen's "To Lovers of Earth: Fair Warning" in the February Harper's magazine.... We liked best the second verse ... characteristical 1 y Cullenian:

whose lusty youth her And you whose lusty youth her snares intrigue. Who glory in her seas, swear by her clouds.

with Age, man's foe, Earth is ever in league;

Time resurrects her even while he crowds

bloom to dust and lengthens Vou

your boom to dust and lengthens out your shrouds A day's length or a year's. She will be young When your last cracked and quiv-eeing note is sung.

low." In the Atlantic Monthly we found Rudolph Fisher's "The Promised Land".....and avidly devoured it... remarking to ourself that this, his second appearance we believe...rec-egnition by so reputable and vener-able a publication further establishes his high position in the group of writers and poets who are a notable constituent of the New Negro move-ment. ment

The setting is Harlem. The story is revealing and tragic. In it are frustrated hopes, and futility......

and worth-

while. To while the hours away leisurely classics are not always synonymous to dryas-dust reading and we are reminded to shout from the housetops that we don't mean to moralize and render this column tiresome.

harsh pictures of the Black Bottom Boys and Charleston Chipples.....A grandmother, her nephews--cousins--and a girl of the city figure--All but the girl are from the South--Virginia, seeking the fulfilment of Harlen's promise. The girl loves one of the cousins, but the money of the other is magnetic. Both boys like her. The stark drama of the resulting sit-uations haunts us yet. Fisher handles the sequence of his episodes and the elements of drama inherent in them with studied restraint......so that they become compelling by the very unhurried calm he has put into them. them

Fisher's "The City or Refuge" pub-lished in that memorable volume "The New Negro"....edited by Alain Lockehas something in common with this story. Both show an observant this story. Both show an observant mind and ability to express the feel-ing and emotions—to etch the deep shadows and high lights of Negro life and that pitiful phase of it showing inability to adjust to new situations found in complex metro-politan society.

olitan society. The American Mercury, edited by the eminent II. L. Mencken, cursed of some, blessed of others, was peered into next.....Black Child" by Winifred Santord caught our attention. A note gave the information that the au-thor is living in Wichiti Falls, Texas....A cursory glance thru the story would not allow us to say whether this apparently southern lady was intellectually emancipated as far as attitudes towards her darker neighbors were concerned. A future care-fut reading will allow us to report our findings.

In the same Green Monster of Fun-damentalists the article......."The Landscape Priesthood" piqued our in-terest. The reason? Weil, it is per-sonal, but we'll tell.....In a repor-torial capacity for a University dally, we attended a Beaux-Arts Ball given by students of architecture, fine arts, and landscape architecture.Cos-tuming was of Parisian-Apache cf-fect, and as far as we could tell the reproduction of the Montmarte bar-reom was entirely authentic....gin-(ger ale) and (root) beer were realis-tically served at the bar......there was a foot rail......and sawdust was spread on the floor......deco-rations were unique; posters showed talent. In the same Green Monster of Fun talent.

talent. As a vital, evolving art, the author of the Mercury article said, landscape architecture is dead. We don't pre-sume to know enough about the sub-ject to question his conclusions...But we do know that each detail of this student Beaux-Arts Ball was colorful enough to afford us copy good enough to reach the front page of the Uni-versity dally. And not a sincle architect.

and not single architect. а And not a single architect, landscaper, or artist—all of the budding class—showed even mild indications of Colorphobia...... Thank God for these landscape architects at any rate!

Somehow, this age seems to be.

among other things, one of increas-

among other things ing popularity for the Enlight-ened Order of Myth DestroyersRupert Hughes recently created a tidal s wave stir by lcc-turing and writ-ing a hout the turing and writ-ing a bout the real George Wash-ington

Now, in January's Review of Rev-views and in February's Century mag-azine, two authors seek to tear down the myths concerning Linclon, Wush-ington, and G. Bernard Shaw. We hold some rather pointed convictions ourself regarding the idea that Lincoln was primarily interested in freeing slaves. The belief persists that our forefathers were pawns in the game of "The Union must be preserved." We hope we are wrong...disillusion is painful.....but sometime we shall mention our reasons for the belief.........It is somehow good that heroes are being shown to be less heroes than human beings and organizations less mythi-cal powers than jokes. The same process is stripping races of preju-dices.

dices.

Herbert S. Gorman says in the Jan-uary Bookman, in an article on Du-mas' works....."It is no part of this article to enter into the vaxatious and much disputed argument as to how far Dumas was responsible for his own books, but it is clear that with-out him his 'collaborators got no-where. He was the force, the vitality, behind these ventures." Dumas was a Negro, yes.....by American stand-ards, most surely.... ards, most surely....

Charles Gilpin. Julian Bled soe, and Paul Robe-son are the sub-jects of a whole page of pictures in the theater magazine. The magazine. The compliment paid: compliment paid: "A triumvirate of Ethiopian Stars whose rich per-formances on Eroadway have won them great applause." applause.

h. 5." very fa. o inter-vs in oth applau-browse very a we got so int prize essays Well, we didn't browse very We didn't because we got so int ested in reading the prize csays the World Tomorrow on "What You Is Thinking" that the library jani had to warn us it was closing th Spon we'll tell you what youth thinking according to the prize we janitor time thinking, according to the prize win-thinking, according to the prize will ners. Browsing around in a library is really fun..., and when you browse around you are missing something good if you fail to read the Journal and Guide, the Op-portunity and Crisis magazines. We forget where we read it but we chuckled when we saw this: Cop: "Who was driving when you hit that car?" Drank (triumphantly) "None of us; we was all on the back seat."